MTA LIRR Rosedale Station Pedestrian Tunnel to Temporarily Close As Part of Station Renovation Work

The MTA Long Island Rail Road Rosedale Station pedestrian tunnel will be temporarily closed until the end of this summer starting April 2. The tunnel is being closed in order to allow for the installation of a new elevator as part of the on-going station renovation project.

Customers may use the underpass at Francis Lewis Boulevard as an alternate means to access the platform staircases.

The Rosedale Station renovation project work includes the installation of a new elevator, installation of a new ten-car station platform, refurbishing the platform level waiting room, ticket office and installation of a new rest room. In addition, the platform canopies, stairs and pedestrian tunnel will be refurbished. New platform lighting and station public address system will also be installed.
