Bon Jovi Concert Comes to Central Park

MTA NYC Transit Can Take You There

In connection with the All-Star game at Yankee Stadium, there will be a Bon Jovi concert in Central Park on Saturday, July 12 at 8 p.m. Lucky concertgoers holding tickets for this free event should know that the A and D are the way to go! MTA NYC Transit is adding additional service to these two lines from 6:30 p.m. up to concert time and after the concert from about 10:30 p.m. to midnight.

Due to construction work on the Eighth Avenue Line, the C train is not running this weekend. The A train will make all local stops along Central Park West all weekend. The D will make local stops before and after the concert. Although entrance to the event will be at 72nd Street on the east and west side of Central Park, west side subway riders attending the concert should leave the subway at 59th Street-Columbus Circle to join the queue. People entering on the east side should approach from 59th Street and 5th Avenue.
