MTA Metro-North Railroad Provides More to Celebrate on July 4th

The July 4th holiday weekend provides fireworks, fun, friends, picnics, and great times. And making it all the better, is Metro-North's Independence Day Weekend schedule.

On Friday, July 2, there will be 15 extra outbound getaway trains from Grand Central—for most everyone who likes to get a jump start on the holiday weekend.

This makes for fewer customers—and fewer trains during the usual p.m. peak as well as later in the evening. For instance, six trains will be combined into three during the ordinary p.m. peak period, and 11 trains will be cancelled during the late p.m. travel time.

All of the additional trains, as well as those combined and cancelled are listed in the June 21 Metro-North timetables and are available on our website at www.mta.info.

Saturday, July 3, trains will operate on a regular Saturday schedule.

Sunday, July 4, will be a regular Sunday schedule. However, there will be four extra, late-night outbound trains, two on the Harlem Line and two on the New Haven Line, to operate after the Macy's fireworks show. These extra trains also are listed in the June 21 timetables.

To accommodate Rye Playland customers as they head home after the fireworks, there will be additional connecting bus and rail service from 9 p.m. July 4 through 1:05 a.m. July 5.

Timetables—showing all additional, combined, and cancelled trains—are available in Grand Central and all outlying Metro-North train stations, or on the web at www.mta.info
