Weekend Suspensions on the Jamaica J Line

Free Shuttle Buses Operate Between Crescent Street and Jamaica Center

MTA New York City Transit announced that there will be more weekends this spring and summer when J train service will be suspended between Crescent Street and Jamaica Center/Parsons-Archer. The work being done includes track and structure rehabilitation in the area of Woodhaven Boulevard and switch replacement north of 121st Street.

This work began in March and will continue on the following weekends: April 16-17 and April 30-May 1. Work will pick up again for all weekends in August and one weekend in September (9/24-9/25).

During these weekends, there are no J trains operating between Crescent Street and Jamaica Center. Customers may take the E train between Jamaica Center and Jamaica-Van Wyck. Free shuttle buses will be available between the Jamaica-Van Wyck E station and the Crescent Street J station.
