MTA Service Advisory: Work to Restore Regular L Line Service to Continue into the Evening

Service Changes to Remain Throughout the PM Peak

Repairs being made to damaged signal equipment between Myrtle Av-Wyckoff Av & Broadway Junction will impact service on the L Line into the evening on Friday. The following service changes will remain in effect:

- There will be no L trains between Broadway Junction and Myrtle Av- Wyckoff Av in both directions. Shuttle buses will continue to operate making corresponding stops between Myrtle Av-Wyckoff Av and Broadway Junction.
- There will be limited L train service running between Canarsie-Rockaway Pkwy and Broadway Junction.
- There will also be reduced L service between Myrtle Av-Wyckoff Av and 8 Av in Manhattan.

Customers from Manhattan headed beyond Myrtle Av-Wyckoff Av station should avoid taking the L from Manhattan to Myrtle Av-Wyckoff Av. Instead, customers should take the A C or J Z to Broadway Junction for the bus to closed stations between Myrtle Av-Wyckoff Av & Broadway Junction or the L train to Canarsie-Rockaway Pkwy. Customers can also take the M to Myrtle Av-Wyckoff Av.

Manhattan-bound customers from Canarsie can transfer at Broadway Junction for A C or J trains for further service into Brooklyn and Manhattan.

Crews are on site working to restore normal service as quickly as possible. Workers could not get to the source of the problem until sunlight and dense fog had cleared earlier this morning.

Customers should allow additional travel time and monitor service status on www.mta.info for updates.
