Limited New Haven Line Train Service Restored with Residual Delays

Metro-North Railroad has announced that limited New Haven Line train service through Norwalk, Connecticut, has resumed with restricted speeds on two of the four tracks on the Walk Bridge. Earlier, train traffic had been suspended between South Norwalk and East Norwalk while crews worked to close the bridge, a 118-year-old swing span that crosses the Norwalk River.

The first train moved eastbound at 6:20 p.m. at a restricted speed of 15 miles per hour. Metro-North anticipates substantial residual delays.
