MTA NYCT Advisory: Avenue X F Line Station Renewal Completed

Manhattan-bound Platform to Re-open After Six Months of Work

Beginning at 5:00 a.m., Monday, December 28, F Line customers will once again have access to the newly refurbished Manhattan-bound platform at the Avenue X station in Brooklyn. The six-month station renewal project is part of a major $80.5 million capital project, awarded to Kiska Construction Inc. that will completely renew nine stations along the Culver F Line.

$9.2 million dollars in improvements at Avenue X include the replacement of staircases, doors, windows, concrete precast platform panels, as well as ADA improvements consisting of the installation of a new platform edge and tactile warning strips. The station was painted and outfitted with new windscreen panels, light fixtures, railings and a new mezzanine passageway and floor.

The Manhattan-bound platform at Avenue X was closed on June 29, 2015. "These improvements will create significantly better conditions for our customers, and we appreciate the community's patience and understanding while we carried out this important work," said Acting SVP Subways, Wynton Habersham.
