

MTA Board Meeting

November 18, 2024

“Contrary to the fears of some, congestion pricing promises to be an economic boon for the region, potentially reducing an estimated $20 billion that excess congestion costs annually because of more efficient and timely movement of people and goods, which will increase productivity and reduce expenditures on fuel and overtime.”

Andrew Rein, President, Citizens Budget Commission
Kathryn Wylde, President & CEO, Partnership for New York City
Louisa Chafee, Director, New York City Independent Budget Office

Broad Support for Congestion Pricing

“Congestion pricing is a proven tool that provides the opportunity to create a more efficient, equitable, and sustainable transportation network that will greatly improve mobility for all who live in, work in, or visit New York City.”

Basha Gerhards
Senior Vice President of Planning
Real Estate Board of New York
